

Bruno Braizinha, CFA
Director, US Rates Strategy
Bank of America Merrill Lynch

Bruno Braizinha is a director in US Rates Strategy at BofA Merrill Lynch Global Research, responsible for generating RV ideas across the US rates product spectrum, building out the infrastructure of quantitative tools used by the team, and contributing to the duration and curve calls. He joined BofA from Société Générale in New York where he was responsible for US rates and cross-asset strategies. Prior to that, he worked at BNP Paribas as a quantitative analyst and desk strategist. He holds a Ph.D. in nuclear astrophysics. He is based in New York.